Serving our neighbors in need including veterans, the aging, the homeless and the disabled.
The difficulties and disruptions, due to the COVID-19 pandemic, were unprecedented. The statement, “Safer At Home” used throughout media, is impossible for people who are experiencing homelessness or at-risk seniors who need food and medicines. Thankfully, through the services provided by Volunteers of America Oklahoma’s dedicated staff, the clients we serve were helped to ensure stable housing with resources to food, employment and medical care. While the virus spread, our staff remained the shining example of support for the clients caring for our most vulnerable populations. Safety protocols were initiated at all locations, while prioritizing the needs of clients. Throughout it all, Volunteers of America staff worked long hours, developed innovative approaches and utilized new technology to prevent hunger, homelessness and isolation.

Barbara Jefferson and over 200 staff members in the Intellectual and Developmental Disabilities program are frontline caregivers keeping the clients they serve healthy. Work activities came to a halt last March for our clients. The solution was to involve clients in hobbies that would keep their activity level high while remaining safe at home. Debbie is one client who loves movies, especially musicals. Even though Debbie is non-verbal, her actions speak louder than words. She loves online church worship songs and the TV show, The Voice. Helping clients step up safety protocols has been a challenge met with much success. “Our caregivers provide the care, activities and connections to family,” said Barbara, who has a 30-year tenure with VOA. “We become like family. The clients’ health and safety is our main priority.”

Veterans Employment Services is a lifeline to veterans experiencing homelessness. As businesses closed and laid off workers, veterans faced eviction and homelessness. The all-veteran team quickly made referrals for housing and resources and then started matching veterans with employers which resulted in 76 veterans finding jobs. Bruce moved to Tulsa from Texas for a new job as an electrician. He left his family in Texas until he could get settled, however, the job fell through. The Veterans Employment Services team introduced Bruce to other electrical companies and soon he had a new job. “Employers are actively seeking to hire veterans,” said Eric Barr, Veteran Employment Consultant. “We are the conduit to match veterans to open positions.”
Senior Housing staff jumped into action to guard against food insecurity and social isolation among 400 senior residents in affordable housing apartments. Parking lot donuts, window bingo, front porch coffee and dance groups performed in parking lots for senior resident audiences. Lunch brown bags and grocery bag distribution helped residents get food supplies that were scarce in some locations. Food donations by Salina United Way, Amazon, Oklahoma City’s Crest Foods and Smithfield Foods helped to stock food pantries. “We support the residents in any way we can,” said Torri Porter, Service Coordinator Supervisor. “Many do not have the help of nearby family.”

Diana Holt and her Payee Services colleagues are resourceful, but their super hero ability excelled to a new level making sure 900 clients were fully utilizing benefits to meet their basic needs. Payee Services manages Social Security benefits for individuals who are unable to manage their own money. Coordinators go above and beyond ensuring clients receive food stamp assistance, reduced cost internet, discounts with utilities companies, reduced fare bus passes, furniture, food bags and reduced rates at extended stay hotels for clients who were homeless and unable to be in shelters. Collaboration with apartment managers helped to resolve issues to avoid eviction. Prior to the pandemic, coordinators met with clients frequently, but pivoted to helping by phone or meeting outside. “We provide emotional support and encouragement and, when necessary, we refer to agencies for mental health support,” Diana Holt explained. “We do all we can to make sure our clients have what they need.”

Double masked and gloved, Retired Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP) volunteers in four counties in eastern Oklahoma couldn’t imagine letting people, who regularly receive meals delivered to their homes, go without because of the pandemic. The volunteers assisted with five meals a week for 52 weeks, for 5,015 people equating to more than 1.3 million meals! Food banks created drive-through grocery pick-up lines, staffed with RSVP volunteers, distributing food bags to residents in need. Volunteers were paired with at-risk seniors and elderly talking by phone and mailing notes to keep loneliness and isolation from prevailing. Handmade hats, mittens and blankets were distributed to hospice patients and people experiencing homelessness. “We connect volunteers to needs of seniors and others in our community, while making sure they were also looking after their own health,” said Samantha Cook, RSVP Director.

SUN SETS ON RHINESTONE COWBOY

The final Rhinestone Cowboy at the historic Cain’s Ballroom was planned for May 1, 2020. Its cancellation, due to the pandemic was heartbreaking as we planned to celebrate one last time.
